

Sports Medicine examines practically and theoretically the influence of movement, Training and Sport and lack of movement on the healthy and sick people of all ages.

The resulting knowledge is used for prevention, treatment and rehabilitation of many disorders ("Sports medicine").

The athletes interested in performing beyond, as various sporting disciplines physical functions and performance in relation to each other (Training Courses) and how damage or injuries prevented and treated them (sports traumatology).

---

Related links {loadposition linklist}